Grace Tubin, thirteen years old, of 561 courtlandt Avenue, didn't know there was an age limit in the suffrage amendment. She entered the polling place at Courtlandt Avenue and 151st Street at Courtlandt Avenue at Courtlandt Obituary Was Written ty-one years old, and being assured The City of New York hurled itself ty-one years he told the ambitious into an election celebration last night girl that she couldn't have the ballet. for that stirred the old town from the slips Whereupon Grace Tubin stormed a night. of South Street to the crags of Wash- protest and declared she was the vic-

In handling the gigantic tidal wave of humanity that swept early in the evening through the navigable thoroughfares of the city the police did a masterful job. In the electrical zone of the theater district, where the jam was the worst, the armies were kept moving north by east and south by west, and the twain never did meet.

In Herald Square and Times Square there were occasional "tide-rips" where hurrying taxicabs got their signals mixed, but these tangles were soon straightened out by the traffic squad.

A more good-humored throng never trod the storied pavements of Broadway. Political questions were forgotten and controversies were regarded as immaterial and out of order. Ever long-haired radicals were caught in the sweep of fun-making, and were seen to smile as they were sucked into the ebb and flow of humanity.

Boughest Blaze in Street. Bonfires Blaze in Streets

Much of the crush and smash of election crowds on Broadway that in other years have made Broadway be tween Herald Square and Forty-second Street a riotous place were removed last night by efficient police work. The men of the traffic squad exercised their authority with a fine spirit of diplo-

WINSTED, Conn., Nov. 2.—When Edward R. Beckley, a building contractor, returned home this evening he found this note: "The wife is boss here now. Have gone to the polls. Get dinner while I am gone or there will be something doing."

Beckley prepared the dinner.
